Identify students who demonstrate the potential and drive to successfully compete for the nation's top scholarships and awards such as the Rhodes, Marshall, Gates-Cambridge, Fulbright, Goldwater, Udall, Truman, NSF, and NCAA to name a few. Connect students with both on- and off-campus undergraduate research opportunities. Pair students with on- and off-campus service organizations. Manage all aspects of the application process to include reviewing essays, provide guidance to both students and their faculty recommenders and write the institutional letters of endorsement. Work closely with campus-wide offices including the Division of Student Affairs, the Office of Admissions, the Office of Inclusion and Diversity, Veterans Resource Center, the Office of International Education, the Office of Undergraduate Research, Residence Life, the Office of the President, the Office of the Provost, Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC, deans, department chairs, and the Athletics Department in an effort to strengthen our partnership and further the mission of the Honors College. Serve as a Faculty-in-Residence responsible for evening advising and organizing the monthly educational and cultural activities in the university's largest Honors residence hall. Recruit faculty to teach in the Honors College. Develop and teach Honors level courses and serve as Honors Thesis advisor. Serve as the Honors College representative on a variety of campus-wide standing and ad hoc committees.

Director, Center for Immigration Studies, March 2006 – July 2008. Augusta State University

The ASU Center for Immigration Studies was established in the spring of 2006 with a mission to highlight and examine the impact that immigration – both historically and at present – has had upon the State and region. The Center sponsors guest lectures, symposia and film screenings which underscore the challenges and opportunities that accompany large-scale immigration to the State, region and country.
